Company Name : OpenText Corporation

Company Sector : Information Technology

Operating Geography : Canada, North America, Global

About the Company : OpenText, headquartered in Waterloo, Ontario, Canada, develops and distributes Information Management software that enables businesses to securely gather, regulate, and communicate data on a worldwide scale. For customers ranging from small and mid-sized businesses to the world's largest and most complicated organisations, OpenText solves digital business concerns. In 1991, Timothy Bray co-founded OpenText Corporation with University of Waterloo professors Frank Tompa and Gaston Gonnet. It arose from OpenText Systems Inc., which was created in 1989. For major businesses, government organisations, and professional service firms, OpenText software programmes manage content or unstructured data. OpenText's products are geared toward meeting information management needs such as managing massive amounts of content, ensuring regulatory compliance, and managing mobile and online experiences. Customer interactions are improved through the company's management of attractive content that drives individualised omnichannel experiences. The company was named a leader by Forrester in The Forrester Wave™: Content Platforms, Q2 2021 on June 15, 2021.

OpenText's Unique Selling Point or USP lies in it being Canada's largest software company and a world leader in information management. The vision statement of the company reads, "OpenText has a clear vision of enabling the digital world. Our employees help us define and enable the digital future with market-leading enterprise solutions for digital transformation. We're also committed to fostering the best possible work environment for our people in each of our locations across the globe".
