About the Company : Koch Industries, Inc. is a private American multinational conglomerate headquartered in Wichita, Kansas. Fred C. Koch, the business's namesake, created the company in 1940 after developing an efficient crude oil refining technology. Koch's global businesses in refined products, chemicals, gas liquids, crude oil services, mineral services, energy services, capital services, road and building materials, chemical technologies, and agriculture all follow a market-based philosophy. Some of Koch's firms include Infor, Invista, Georgia-Pacific, Molex, Flint Hills Resources, Koch Pipeline, Koch Fertilizer, Koch Minerals, Matador Cattle Company, i360, and Guardian Industries. The organization collaborates with a wide range of businesses and industries around the world to improve and discover new methods to make life better. It provides numerous opportunities to enhance life's necessities, such as food, clothing, water, transportation, and technology. The company employs around 120,000 people across 60 nations as of early 2023, with the United States accounting for over half of its revenue.

Koch Industries, Inc.'s USP lies in its being the largest non-Canadian landowner in the Athabasca oil sands and the country's largest privately held corporation. The mission statement of Koch Industries reads, "To maximize the present value of future profits".
