Company Name : Keysight Technologies

Company Sector : Electronic Design Products and Services

Operating Geography : United State, North America, Global

About the Company :

Keysight Technologies is a test and measurement equipment and software company headquartered in the United States. Before becoming an independent firm, the group that became Keysight was Hewlett-and Packard's then Agilent's electronic test and measurement divisions. Agilent and Keysight Technologies were formally separated on November 1, 2014, and Keysight became an independent company. Measurement solutions and customer support and services are the two divisions of the company. The measurement solutions segment creates the majority of revenue and sells hardware and software, such as radiofrequency, microwave, and digital solutions. Customers who have purchased Keysight products can use the customer support and services area to acquire repair and calibration services, and refurbished equipment can be resold. On June 30, 2021, the company teamed together with industry leaders at Mobile World Congress 2021 to present 5G commercialisation options. Keysight has over 14,000 employees as of 2022.

Keysight Technologies' Unique Selling Point or USP lies in its being a leading technology company that delivers advanced design and validation solutions to help accelerate innovation to connect and secure the world. The mission statement of Keysight Technologies reads, "Since our beginnings in a Silicon Valley garage, our entrepreneurial spirit and passion have been focused on one mission: helping customers accelerate innovation to connect and secure the world".
