Company Name : Taiyo Nippon Sanso Corporation

Company Sector : Industrial Gas Production and Vacuum Insulated Bottles

Operating Geography : Japan, Asia, Global

About the Company :

Nippon Sanso Holdings, generally known as NSHD, is a multinational Japanese manufacturer of industrial gas. With more than 50 subsidiaries and affiliates in different nations, NSHD is headquartered in Koyama, Shinagawa-ku, and Tokyo in Japan. Through its brand and subsidiaries, the corporation today conducts business in more than 30 different nations. The company was established in 1910. Industrial gases, electronics, and the Thermos business are the company's three primary business sectors. The corporation operates internationally, and the majority of its earnings are generated by the gas industry in Japan. The steelmaking, chemical, automotive, and medical industries are all served by the industrial gases business. After Praxair, Inc. was acquired, the industrial gases industry had a significant expansion as a result of the addition of a new business sector. Major semiconductor manufacturers have a supply chain in East Asia, which is a hub for the electronics industry. In May 2022, the company released its medium-term management strategy, which calls for more internationalisation and expansion through the acquisition of the European business and the U.S. HyCO* business.

Nippon Sanso Holdings's USP is that it is among the top five industrial gas suppliers globally and the largest producer of industrial gas in Japan. The mission statement of Nippon Sanso reads, "Making life better through gas technology".
