Company Name : Palo Alto Networks

Company Sector : Network and Enterprise Security

Operating Geography : United States, North America, Global

About the Company : Palo Alto Networks, Inc. stands as a prominent American multinational cybersecurity company headquartered in Santa Clara, California. Established in 2005 by Nir Zuk, a former engineer from Check Point and NetScreen Technologies, the company has evolved into a cybersecurity leader, offering a comprehensive enterprise cybersecurity platform. This platform encompasses advanced firewalls, cloud security, endpoint protection, and various cloud-delivered security solutions, serving a vast clientele of over 70,000 organizations across more than 150 countries, including 85 Fortune 100 companies. At the heart of Palo Alto Networks is the Unit 42 threat research team, a distinguished group of cybersecurity researchers and industry experts. Leveraging data collected by the company's security platform, Unit 42 plays a crucial role in identifying and addressing new cyber threats, ranging from emerging malware to malicious actors operating globally. Palo Alto Networks actively contributes to the cybersecurity community and knowledge sharing through initiatives like hosting the Ignite cybersecurity conference and being a partner organization of the World Economic Forum. In its commitment to innovation and strengthening its cybersecurity capabilities, Palo Alto Networks completed the acquisition of Talon Cyber Security, a pioneer in enterprise browser technology, in December 2023. The company's dedication to excellence is reflected in its recognition as a Leader in the 2023 Gartner® Magic Quadrant for Endpoint Protection Platforms (EPP) announced in 2024, underscoring its position as a trusted and influential entity in the ever-evolving landscape of cybersecurity.

Palo Alto Networks' USP or unique selling proposition lies in being the global leader in cybersecurity solutions serving top-notch clients across the globe with its revolutionary solutions in this digital age. Palo Alto's mission statement reads "to protect our way of life in the digital age by preventing successful cyber-attacks."
