About the Company : Tupperware is an American multinational direct sales company having its headquarter in Orlando, Florida, US. It was founded in 1946 in Grafton, Massachusetts, US, with early beginnings in 1942, when Earl Tupper developed his first bell shaped container. This 70-year-old globally admired company runs through a 3.2 million successful Sales Force spread across 80 countries and is sold in over 100 countries. Spread across seven decades, the products have become increasingly diverse, beautiful and convenient. Tupperware was the flagship brand to adopt direct marketing strategy made famous by the Tupperware party. As of early 2018, Tupperware employed over 12,000 people, of whom approximately 1,000 were based in the United States. The company underwent a name change, mirroring its identity as a "multibrand, multicategory direct-sales company," in December 2005, to bring focus up on its product diversity. The company was renamed Tupperware Brands Corporation. Over 39 world-renowned red dot awards adorn The Tupperware Design Team's hat, which is the highest honorary distinction in the design world.

Tupperware's vision reads, "Ignite a global community, especially women, to realize their best selves through opportunity, enrichment, celebration, and above all else, uplifting relationships. We are committed to accelerating profitable revenue growth for the benefit of all our stakeholders." Tupperware's USP or unique selling proposition lies in being the pioneering global direct-to-consumer company engaged in the manufacture and sale of high quality home and kitchen products and being the most trusted brands in housewares.
