About the Company : Eurofins Scientific is a life sciences company headquartered in Luxembourg, providing a unique range of analytical testing services to clients across multiple industries, particularly in the field of pharmaceutical, food, environmental, Agriscience, and consumer products. It was founded in 1987 when its founder Gilles Martin purchased the rights to the SNIF-NMR technology, which aimed to verify the origin and purity of several types of food and beverages. In the next 33 years, the company has grown to over 47,000 staff spread over in 900 independent companies in over 50 countries and is currently operating more than 800 laboratories. Eurofins has been one of the fastest-growing in Europe since it went public with an average annual growth exceeding 29% for the last 22 years. The company boasts a portfolio of over 200,000 analytical methods for evaluating the safety, identity, credibility, composition, origin, and purity of biological substances and products. It is also one of the very few companies across the world that provides services for genomics, forensics, advanced material sciences and for supporting clinical studies.

Investing heavily in research and development and providing a wide range of testing methods in the field of biotechnology and analytical chemistry has been the primary focus of Eurofins. It also provides essential services in specialty esoteric and molecular clinical diagnostic testing in Europe and the USA. Significant investments in innovation, Information technology, and logistics and huge sample volumes ensure that customers enjoy high standards of quality at reasonable prices.

The vision of Eurofins states, "To be the Global Leader in Testing for Life" and the company places its core values on the pillars of customer focus, competence and team spirit, quality, and integrity. Eurofins Scientific proudly maintains that the mission of its business is "To contribute to a safer and healthier global ecosystem by providing its clients with innovative and high-quality laboratory, research, and advisory services while creating opportunities for the employees and generating sustainable shareholder value.”
