Company Name : Safran S.A.

Company Sector : Aerospace and Defense

Operating Geography : France, Europe, Global

About the Company : Safran S.A. is a French multinational company founded in 2005. It is a multinational aircraft engine, rocket engine, aerospace-component and defense company. A merger between the aircraft and rocket engine manufacturer and aerospace component manufacturer group SNECMA and the security company SAGEM, resulted in the birth of Safran in 2005. Safran took control of Zodiac Aerospace in 2018, significantly expanding its aircraft equipment activities. Safran is headquartered in Paris and employs over 95,000 people as of 2020. The name 'Safran' translates as rudder blade and also as saffron, which is attributed with triggering early international trade. A launcher joint venture called Airbus Safran Launchers was created by Safran with Airbus Group in May,2015. The Safran group is divided into three main branches; the first is the Aerospace Propulsion branch which groups all operations concerning the propulsion of aeroplanes, helicopters, missiles, and launchers, for the civil aviation, military aviation, and space markets: design, production, marketing, testing, maintenance, repair, and overhaul (MRO). The second division comprises the Aircraft Equipment, Defense and Aerosystems branch which oversees all design, production, sales, and support operations for systems and equipment used by civil and military airplanes and helicopters, and the third is the Aircraft Interiors branch which groups the cabin interiors, passenger and technical seats, cabin equipment and solutions focused on passenger comfort. This French defence MNC features on the Euronext stock exchange's list and is a part of the CAC 40 and Euro Stoxx 50 indices.

Safran's Unique Selling Proposition or USP lies in it being the leading international high-technology group and top-notch supplier of systems and equipment in the Aerospace and Defence markets. Safran's mission statement reads "Safran is helping America's armed forces and those of allied nations around the world meet their missions with a wide range of advanced technologies – many of which are produced and supported by Safran businesses in the United States."
